

7th Transformer technology & fluid diagnostics testing seminar

may 17th - 20th 2016

Presidente Intercontinental
Monterrey, N.L., Mexico

In a changing electrical market, assuring optimal performance to meet the increased demand for reliable energy requires an increased knowledge of all the critical components that affect the life of your Transformers.

We offer some topics to learn about how the changing industry, economic and technical conditions might impact transformers technology and applications.

This seminar is directed to Operations and Maintenance personnel that are involved with or have responsibility for selecting, acquiring, operating, maintaining or replacing transformers.

In addition to offering the participants the opportunity to enhance their knowledge of Power Transformers to help facilitate their operative decisions in a more effective manner, it will also serve as a guide to learn about how industry trends might impact transformer's specifications, design and operation.

The first three days of the seminar are dedicated to the Power Transformer and the review of its technology, design, testing, maintenance and key components.

The fourth day of the seminar is dedicated to Electrical Fluid Diagnostics which covers a great variety of subjects including the sampling, testing, and assessing of insulating fluids to help extend transformer life.

On the second day, a guided visit¹ of either the world class plants of Prolec GE or WEIDMANN will be provided.

¹ Please note that both organizations have policies that restrict access to their facilities from individuals representing competing organizations. The participants in the plant tours shall wear closed shoes (no open toed or high heeled shoes are permitted).
